

Scott Schwaller

Manager, Loss Control Services Kansas City Region

Scott joined the United Heartland team in 2008 and currently manages Loss Control consultants in the Kansas City region. He has worked with a variety of business types, including community service providers, health care providers and manufacturers.

Following college, Scott worked in the safety department at a heavy manufacturing plant, managing workers' compensation, developing and maintaining safety programs and policies, providing management and employee training, and conducting industrial hygiene monitoring and sampling throughout the facility. During his time in that role the organization reduced their workers' compensation expenses by more than 40% through improved safety programs and aggressive workers' compensation claims management. Scott has assisted with the development of new equipment, specifically designing the equipment with workers' safety being a top priority.

Scott has received specialized training on safe patient handling and movement, behavior support programs for social service agencies, machine guarding, industrial hygiene sampling, occupational hearing conservation, and other safety and injury prevention topics.

Scott obtained his Bachelor of Science in Industrial Technology with an emphasis on Occupational Safety and Health from Iowa State University.
