

Technology in the Disability Arena

This week, IACP's own Ben Woodworth is traveling to Boulder, Colorado to meet with some of the world's foremost experts in technology and disability. IACP's recent grant award from the Coleman Institute on Cognitive Disabilities requires Ben to present on the IACP project, including key highlights from the recent technology survey that many of you took part in. IACP will be releasing the findings soon.

Also happening in Boulder is a day-long summit on the latest knowledge and innovation in technology as it relates to people with cognitive disabilities.

If you haven't had a chance to review the Declaration (check out this link: <http://www.colemaninstitute.org/declaration> and endorse this movement - IACP is hoping that as many people from Iowa engage in supporting the Declaration.
